Note. For omissions of books in the cheap libraries, and other cheap issues, see Appendix after subject-alphabet.

SUBJECT–ALPHABET.

NOTE.

Subject Entries. — The subject-alphabet though in one respect a topical index to the first (author-and-title) alphabet, is nevertheless complete in itself, and can be bound, if desired, as a separate volume or independent use. Novels, juveniles, plays, and poems (excepting anthologies), are not repeated here, as the first alphabet, giving them under authors and titles, supplies the entries under which they are sought, and the placing of these large classes in the subject alphabet would interfere seriously with its practical use. Laws and law reports entered under the name of states in the first alphabet, as well as sermons and essays identified only by the names of the authors, are also not repeated in this part. With these exceptions the material of the first alphabet is duplicated in the second alphabet, but arranged on a different plan to answer a different purpose. The object of the present alphabet is to show what books have been issued on any given topic.

The arrangement is by specific subjects; not by general classes. Books upon kindred topics are not grouped under a general heading; but each is placed under the particular subject of which it treats. Thus, histories of the United States will be found under "United States," not under "History;" histories of Massachusetts, under "Massachusetts," not under "United States;" and histories of Boston, under "Boston," not under "Massachusetts." Lives of individuals are in like manner placed under their names, and not under "Biography;" treatises upon the different metals, under the name of each metal, and not under "Metals." Only universal histories, collected biographies, general works upon science, etc., are entered under "History," "Biography," "Science," etc. When a title relates to a subject and also to a place, though often entered under both, preference is given to the subject, as: "Coues, E. Check-list of North American birds," will be found under "Birds" rather than under "North America." For this reason, for subdivisions not found under "America," "North America," "United States," etc., turn to the general subject. References are freely made from the general to the special; but, as a rule, they are not considered necessary from the special to the general. References are also made to nearly-related subjects, and from the synonyms of the adopted headings. There are many cases of books with obscure, ambiguous, or meaningless titles, in which it has been impossible, in the absence of the books themselves, to determine with certainty their specific subjects; these have been placed under general subjects, when the general subjects were evident. The user of the subject alphabet should remember that by reference to a more general heading he will often find what might otherwise escape him on the specific subject or kindred topics. In most cases books have been placed under one specific subject-heading, and cross-headings have been made from the synonyms. In a few cases, however, there will be found entries under practically synonymous headings, following the word used in the actual title of the book. "Church-music," "Anthems," "Hymns," "Songs," etc., furnish a case in point.

In searching for books on specific subjects the extended catalogue of Bibliographic Aids, prepared by Mr. Leypoldt personally as a preface to the subject volume of the original American Catalogue (1876), is still of the greatest value, and should be consulted by the student.

NOTE ON GOVERNMENT PUBLICATIONS.

THE list of Government publications given in this Appendix to the AMERICAN CATALOGUE is an endeavor to present as complete a record as possible of the publications of all the departments of the Government (except reports of the Courts, which are given in the author-alphabet of the AMERICAN CATALOGUE), and the issues of the Smithsonian Institution, from January 1, 1881, to June 30, 1884; and to give them in such a way as to indicate the relations of the various documents and periodicals to each other, so that the list may serve as a key to Government publications past and future, as well as present. The first date is approximately that of the end of the Catalogue of Government publications edited for the Government by B: Perley Poore, which is a strictly chronological arrangement of all volumes, pamphlets, etc., issued by the United States, so far as titles could be gathered by the editor, through the Forty-sixth Congress (March, 1881), containing probably over a hundred thousand titles, with a full subject-index, but with no division by departments and bureaus. The body of this work is finished and ready to print.

The basis of the present list was a transcript of the record of books received at the Smithsonian Institution for distribution through the International Bureau of Exchanges. The Public printer is required by law to send to that bureau fifty copies of each document of any kind issued by him; but, as a matter of fact, the receipts and records, notwithstanding the carefulness of administration, are very imperfect. In endeavoring to complete the information from this source, the Catalogue and yearly Appendixes of the Massachusetts State Library, those of the Brooklyn Library, the reports of the Public Printer, and the Government lists from the several departments and bureaus which issue lists, have been carefully gleaned. Finally, two visits have been made to Washington by the editor, for the purpose of planning and perfecting the list, and most of the bureaus issuing publications have been visited for personal consultation.

The great difficulty in cataloguing Government publications is a difficulty inherent in the publications themselves. The existence of bureaus in several departments doing similar work; the occasional transfer of such a bureau or its work from one department to another; the issue of the same "document" in different shapes, series, or combinations (some in as many as five different ways); the general duplication of department reports in Congressional series; the fact that the title-page dates of Congressional volumes have no relation to the actual date of printing or binding of the several parts or to their imprint dates; the inclusion as one number of a series with a single volume-number, of a set of volumes issued at intervals of years; the gaps in the numbering of supposedly continuous series, — these are a few of the dilemmas that baffle any attempt to catalogue Government publications with any standard of bibliographical accuracy in mind. But the fact that no satisfactory list of current Government publications is in existence made even an approximately satisfactory list the more necessary in connection with the AMERICAN CATALOGUE.

The principle of bibliography for Government publications set forth by Mr. Cutter, in his Rules, is to give the separate bureaus in their alphabetical order, and to give the titles within those divisions in their alphabetical order. This list departs from that plan, for the practical purpose of showing the relations of the several lines of publication to each other. The divisions of the executive departments have, therefore, been retained as general heads, the several bureaus or other subdivisions placed under them, and the titles arranged as far as possible to group the same kinds of documents together, the general order observed being: first, the annual reports; second, the laws and decisions; third, the periodical issues; and, finally, the miscellaneous, arranged as far as practical by date of issue. But the date of issue is often not to be ascertained, because of the confusion of dates already mentioned, and, when the date of the text of a report is cited, the imprint date is not usually given. In many cases, also, it has not been practical to obtain other bibliographical data, even as regards size, without still further delays which could not be permitted. Periodicals and sets which are virtually serials are distiuguished by entry of their general heading in italics. In many of the sets of volumes and periodicals entered, volumes are given which are only nominally issued, and which may not be actually bound and delivered for some years to come. On the other hand, some books are included within the limitations of this list, although they seem to belong in sets of volumes of earlier date; and a few books, issued previous to the period of this Catalogue, are also included, because of their standard character or bibliographical importance. Mere office blanks, and minor sheets of administrative instructions, it has not been attempted to include.

Several attempts have been made by the Government to catalogue its own publications, and in pursuance of a Senate resolution of March 24, 1881, most of the executive departments reported lists of their issues. These were, however, very imperfect. Such catalogues or lists as are issued by the departments or bureaus are mentioned at the head of the entries. Their data will, however, be found conflicting and confusing and there is great need for some system of record which shall give the data periodically in proper shape. The PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is endeavoring to do this in the second number of each month; Mr. J. H. Hickox, in Washington, D. C., is giving a more detailed record, including the titles of individual Congressional reports, of his admirable monthly Catalogue of United States Publications; Messrs. J. Anglim & Co., of Washington, also send out a monthly bulletin, priced, of the leading government issues. If the present list serves a practical purpose, and proves to be of use in bringing about a better Government bibliography in the future, the work will not be in vain.

The Ho. Exec. Docs. are the chief series of Gov. Pubs., and with the Ho. Misc. Docs. give a nearly complete series of the issues of the departments and special commissions, the various issues of which are duplicated under the lists of department publications. A "List of Congressional Documents, 20th to 46th Congress [1827–81]" 4°, was issued by the Interior Dept., in 1882. There is a necessary confusion as to dates of issue, from the fact that the title-pages have a uniform date for each Congress, though, for instance, Sen. Misc. Doc., 46th Cong.: 3d sess., v. 3, dated 1881, was not bound and issued until 1883. Each volume of each series contains an index to the volumes of the series, though this index is not always absolutely complete. The government year is usually the fiscal year, i.e., July, '83–June, '84, is quoted as 1884.
